ASACS

How to Avoid Power Struggles and Increase Communication with Kids

Do:

-Have conversations in private (without the attention or focus of other children who may egg the situation on). "Let's talk about this in private".

-Let them know that you realize you can't control them. "I know I cannot control you.

What I would like from you is...."

-Set clear, concrete rules and expectations in advance. Let kids know your position on drugs, alcohol, and values. "I want you to have fun tonight. Let's review what the boundaries are and the consequences for not following them".

-Be honest about your feelings and let your teen express their feelings openly without being judged, evaluated or criticized.

Don't:

-Ridicule, use frequent sarcasm or criticism to try to change behavior.

-Make vague or unenforceable threats: "You are never going to leave this house again."

-Make unnecessary invasions on your teen's privacy. Knock before you enter their room, let them know in advance your policy on internet and email communications, allow them privacy on the telephone.

Remember, getting teens to communicate usually depends respect for their parents. Making threats and demands, issuing orders and using criticism will erode respect and make communication difficult. Teens who know that they have their parent's trust and confidence in their abilities tend to share ideas and experiences openly.

What is ASACS?

ASACS has as a main objective to prevent teens from becoming involved in unhealthy life style choices such as alcohol or drug abuse. Another main objective is to provide teens who have already experimented with alcohol or drugs, or who have started to use these regularly an opportunity to develop more positive coping and recreational skills. We can also help adolescents and their families by providing a safe place to talk things out.

All services are FREE, CONFIDENTIAL and AVAILABLE to adolescents and their families who are Darby residents and ID card holders.

For more info call: Amy Rozett, M.A., Ed. S., LPC, NCAC II. Licensed /Certified Professional Counselor-Nationally Certified Addiction Counselor at 633-7933 or email Amy.Rozett@darby.setaf.army.mil
